WHAT GEO. P. ROWELL & CO. SAY.

The well-known advertising agency of dec. P.

Rowell & Co , of New York City, have issued an annual Newspaper Directory for over thirty years, and these publications have been generally recognized as authority as to the matter newspaper cirsulation. In the regular issue of the Directory they have ue ud-d all the newspapers published in the United States and Canada, Recently, however, they have issued a condensed tist. It gives 'only THE BEST nesspapers as advertising mediums, be space of one inch. Fractional squares want to know the neer. Hence the value of the work under notice. The publishers in the preface well say; "It sifts the weat from the chaff. It directs the attention of an advertiser toward papers which he should and ought to use, and tends to intercept a portion of that patronage which goes to lications which cost greatly in excess of any power to benefit which they possess. It takes the general ground that the best is the cheapest." We need scarcely say that on this plan the Fann Paras is given by this book (see page 158) as THE advertising medium of San Marcos and Hays county t being the only one on the list. We respectfully nvite the attention of advertisers, both at home and broad, to this fact

BROKEN OUT!

How often do we see this on the faces of children and, alas, of people who otherwise are healthy? What causes it? Bad Blood. The thought is terrible; the trouble is worse. No ordinary help can trouble is worse. No ordinary help can remove it. It requires something unusual. Do not take cheap sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. You must have something that has proven its power in both Europe and America. General Wheatcroft Nelson, of London, says: "My experience in the English army, as well as in America, convinces me that nothing so thoroughly purifies the blood, or adds to the health, vigor and life, as Dr. Acker's English Blood Elixir."

This grand Elixir is sold by druggists in all parts of America. It is a good, pure, honest medicine. Try it to-day.

From the Saturday Evening Post. Better than them All. derate share of wealth is good

To cheer us on our way, For it has oftentimes the power To make December May; And so is beauty, so is health, Or genius at our call; But a happy, hopeful, loving heart Is better than them all.

A heart that gathers hope and faith From every springing flower; That smiles alike at winter storm And gentle summer shower; That ble see God for every good; Or whether great or small; Oh! a happy, hopeful, loving heart Is better than them all.

Tis well to hold the wand of power Or wear an honored name, And blush to hear the mighty world

Re echo with our fame; Tis well if on our path the smiles Of kings and nobles fall; But to have a happy, trusting heart Is better than them all.

A heart that with the music notes Of music is beguiled; A heart that loves the pleasant face Of every little child; That aideth weakness in distress; And heareth duty's call; Oh! such a loving, human heart Is better than them all.

THE CHEMIST'S STORY.

I am a chemist. I am the occupant of this responsible and important position in the medical college of P---. It was about 1 o'clock on a stormy evening that I bade good night to my student, Tom Richards, at the door of my laboratory, at the south end of the college buildings. Tom was very anxious to know what would keep me up after 12 o'clock, so I told him I was about to commence analyzing the stomach of a Mrs. Johnson, whose husband lay in P-- jail, just across the road from the college, on suspicion that he was the murderer. As Tom was passing out of the college yard through the gate, his head turned, and bidding me good night, he brushed against a man standing with his back to the college and his face to the prison. The street lamp showed me that the man was in police uniform. Re-entering my laboratory I took I came upon a small, inflaitesimal white grain. By careful manipulation and the to get this upon a piece of smoked glass and examined it. I was then certain I had discovered arenic, but to make assurance doubly sure I determined to apply a well known test for that poison. "Yes," I exclaimed, as I saw the fatal blazon, "Joe Johnson is the murderer of his wife! With the evidence of that mark to back me no power can save

"Do you really think so?" said a calm voice behind me.

I turned quickly and discovered a tall; lank policeman, having red, watery eyes, Joy. standing at my office door and staring in. His body looked as if it had been rolled out long before his hands like a molasses candy stick. He had no expression at all in his face, and his policeman's hat was so large that it threatened to settle down on his shoulders. His uniform reassured me and I addressed him with some impatience.

"My friend, I suppose I am wanted to attend an inquest, or what is your purpose?"

I was police surgeon as well as coroner. "Don't bother, professor; the man ain't dead yet, but they say he will be before morning. "What's the matter with him?"

"Brain disorder, I mean something wrong here." I touched my forehead, and so did he give the regular of price each publication singly as he said: "Ay, as I thought I'd drop in in the second the price of the same and the Fass and tell you if you were going to the

> I wanted to see where I could always and no more. find you in case of need." I bowed, and attributed his visit to a feeling of curiosity. He sat on the sink, and while his eyes wandered about like one who felt himself called upon to say something, he said: "Professor, there has been an accident this afternoon-terrible, too." "What was it?" "Nitro glycerine explosion up in the iron mills-a hundred fellow mortals busted." "Sad!" "Affecting, very." Here he rubbed his mouth with the back of his hand.

"Professor, what is that nitro glycerine?" "It's a very dangerous article," I answered, happy to display my knowledge. "It has nearly twice the destructiveness of gunpowder, but, unlike it, does not plode it. It will freeze. It is yellow and greasy."

"You don't mean to say so," said the officer, interrupting me in disagreeable tones in the middle of a choice extract was trotted in 1818 in New York. "No?" I heard the policeman remark in deliberate Yankee tones, "you don't

The next moment I lay on my back, gag in my mouth, terribly frightened and sick at heart. Over me stood the policeman and the first thing that functionary did was—looking me straight in the face—to take off his nose. He then rid himself of his eyebrows, hair and cap, and became a determined looking fellow, with the eyes of a fiend and the nose of a Roman.

"So you think," said the metamorphosed, in the tones of a gentleman, "that nothing can save J.e Johnson from the rope? Poor fellow! It does look like it! But my dear professor, Joe Johnson is fortunate enough to have in me a devoted friend as well as brother. I have undertaken to save him, and he shall be saved. In order to accomplish this end it will be necessary to remove from the face of the earth not only the stomach of his miserable wife yonder, but also, my dear professor-I am sorry to be obliged to say it, for I believe you were my brother's teacher and friend— yourself as well." I saw that he was in deadly earnest.

"Your death must apparently result from accident—at least so it must seem to the authorities. My brother is in jail and they will not suspect him, and they certainly will not suspect me."

What terrible deed was in this brain hatching—was he going to murder me? Was it myself who was to hang, instead of Johnson? No; yes. He placed the line pulley Shirts and Clothing to please all. Come and secure bargains. like over an arm of a hanging chandeller. This was altogether too slight a support even for one of my tender frame. It was not to be hanging, then. Under the weight on the floor he placed a can of nitro-glycerine; I recognized the yellow string; it was a fuse, and it would burn in sixty minutes. It would run across the marble slab; there was no hope of igniting any substance that would warn my friends. "Do you begin to see through it?" asked Joe Johnson's brother.

I believe I cursed him with my eyes. I could only breathe through my nostrils, and great veins were swelling and growing hot in my forehead. Drawing a match from his pocket he lighted and lown a glass jar from the shelf and sat applied it to the fuse; that little tyrant down behind my sink to examine it. With that he turned to take his hat from off the table covered with the crimson cloth beneath which hid my priceless boy. Something attracted his attention. He held out his hands and reached forward. War Engle's Stony Glare.

There is great excitement among the Kickapoos over the discovery of a petri-fied boly supposed to be that of War Eagle, a leading chief of the tribe who died many years ago, shortly after the tribe's return from Old Mexico. Instead of the remains being deposited in the ground in a coffin they were placed in an upright position in a large hollow tree, there to await the coming of the happy hunting days, as the Indians believe. During the rage of a flerce forest fire the trunk of the tree was consumed ed the smallest page on the floor to the chair, retired to his seat and enjoyed the by the flames. immediately abandoned. Luckily some of the more civilized members of the tribe had influence enough to allay the feeling of fear, and den gave the desk a parting whack and the plan of desertion was not carried out. The place of fright was visited later in the day, when sure enough the petrified body of War Eagle was ex-huned and placed upon exhibition. The petrification was perfect. The war costume was as natural as life, there being a perfect imprint on the stone of both gun and tomahawk, which were buried alongside the body. The peculiar formation of stone presents an imposing appearance, and, but for the occasional creases caused by insects, would be clear of any imperfections. A large, hollow oak was selected, the top sawed off about fourteen feet from the ground, and the petrified body placed upright therein, to remain forever. A two inch pine slab bearing the following inscription marks the petrified remains of this tribe's greatest warrior:

"War Eagle, great fighter, turned into rock. Indians afraid Great Spirit. Let him sleep on his beauty forever."—Cor. St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A Walking Benefaction. A gentleman whose name should be handed down to perspiring posterity as the greatest benefactor of the summer of 1890 walked down Broadway at the hottest hour of the hottest day last week. He was only a tramp, and an awful specimen of his kind at that, but he wore a heavy hooded nister, buttoned from his chin to his toes, with such a delightful air of ease and comfort that he sent a grateful chill, worth at least twenty-five cents to each recipient, down the spines of fully 10,000 sweltering podestrians.-New York Times.

P. O. Sullivan, who lives about six niles above the junction of the Middle and South Fork of Boise, on the former, killed a black bear with a knife. He had followed the bear for several miles. It lay down beside a rock, and Sullivan crept up to it and plunged a big knife into a vital part. George Alexander, who is a neighbor, and saw the bear where it was dead, was in the city and related the story. It was related the story. It was very large and would weigh 500 pounds.—Boise (Idaho)
